MEN OF TOMORROW

The Story of The Star's Carrier Boys—This One Is Weldon Taylor, of Hope

My name is Weldon Taylor. I am 13 years old.

My parents' names are Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Taylor. I live at 1802 South Main street.

I have been delivering papers for 3 months.

I start at the corner of Walnut and East Avenue D and deliver part of Walnut, most of North Hazel and a few side streets.

The people on my route treat me nice. I like them all. Some of my best customers are Miss Virginia O'Neal, Mr. J. E. Schooley, Mrs Akin and Mrs. Sprage.

The public teaches me that there are a few honest people in this world. One day while returning from my route I lost a dollar bill. The next day a friend told me that a Mrs. Taylor, who lives on Gilbert Odell's route had found a bill where I had lost mine. The next day I went to her house and she returned it to me, for which I was very thankful. It also teaches me not only to live for yourself but to live for others as well.

When I grow up I would like to be an aviator or a druggist. I would like to keep up my music, but who knows?, I may be the president some day.

Anyhow, whatever I am, wish me luck.

So long.
Waldon Taylor.

Bowers, U.S. Envoy to Spain, Is Safe; Rebels Are Losing

Direct Telephone Communication Established With America

CUT OFF FOR DAYS

American Citizens Who Wished to Have Already Left War Zone

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The State Department Friday night established direct telephone communication with Ambassador Claude G. Bowers at Fuentarrabia, Spain, and was assured by him that he was all right.

The ambassador reported that the American battleship Oklahoma and the Coast Guard cutter Cayuga were in San Sebastian harbor but that all Americans who desired to leave had departed on a British vessel just before the two ships reached there.

The State Department announced that Secretary Hull tried unsuccessfully during the afternoon to reach the American embassy either at Madrid or San Sebastian by transatlantic telephone, but that about 8:30 p. m. E. S. T., a connection was made with Bowers direct at his summer villa at Fuentarrabia.

Situation Confused

The department's announcement of the conversation said:

"In speaking of general conditions in Spain, the ambassador said that reports received are contradictory. He is cut off from communication with Seville and Madrid, but in San Sebastian there has been serious fighting.

"Stray bullets have struck the hotel where the American chancery is located, and two hotels have been taken over for hospitals. Martial law is in effect from Barcelona to Malaga along the Spanish coast. Rebels have Pamplona, Bugos, and Saragosa.

"In San Sebastian the government is in control. The government is also in control of Madrid.

"The ambassador explained that he was unable to cross the border to submit telegraphic reports since all traffic even in diplomatic cars was closed and that he was depending entirely upon radio.

"In Seville the rebels are in control and from that point they are broadcasting stories of rebel successes."

Bombs Explode Near Ship

The American consul at Tangiers has protested to Spanish rebel leaders against the dropping of three bombs by rebel airplanes which exploded near an American steamer, the Exmouth, in the Strat of Gibraltar.

The American Red Cross advised the State Department today it would cable money to the American embassy in Spain to meet any distressed condition among American refugees. The offer included funds for helping stranded persons to leave Spain.

Clerk's Death Established

The American consulate at Barcelona established definitely that one of its Spanish employees was slain there

500 Persons Turn Out at Laneburg for Nevada Tour

Battle on Stump Between Weaver and Bradley for County Judgeship

COUNTY DEBT ISSUE

Bryson and Silvey Also in Two-Man Race for Nevada Representative

By Kelly Bryant

A crowd of about 500 gathered at Laneburg, Friday night to hear the third engagement of the Nevada county political stump tour.

The speaking opened with the candidates for the office of county clerk. John A. Jarvis, Herbert Garrett, Woodrow Gentry, and Henry H. Allen, Jr., made short announcements.

Feeling is running high in the races for county judge and representative. Judge E. H. Weaver was the first speaker for the judgship. He discussed the county's indebtedness and from his figures showed the county to be in a better financial condition than two years ago when he took over the office. In addition he stated that under the co-operative plan of federal and county road work 62 miles of modern 24-foot crown roads were laid out for Nevada county, and that 23 miles of this project had already been completed, the average cost of these roads being $3,000 per mile. He defended his purchase of two new tractors and two new graders on the ground that it was necessary to have this machinery if the county was to obtain federal aid.

Bradley Opposes Him

J. W. Bradley, the only opposing candidate, followed the judge. In his 20-minute talk he took the figures quoted by Mr. Weaver on the county indebtedness and stated that the real indebtedness should read several thousand dollars higher than that stated by the judge. This difference is accounted for in that the county has not yet issued warrants for the new tractor which was recently purchased, Mr. Bradley said, and also that many claims had not been filed for courthouse expenses and recent road work.

Mr. Bradley also charged that more road work had been done in the past 30 days than had been done in the previous six months, and that this work was for political reasons.

In the rebuttal Mr. Weaver pointed out that two nights ago at Boughton Mr. Bradley had used his own figures to prove his points but that now "He has thrown them away and is using mine." Judge Weaver also said that it was his understanding that the Federal government would pay a large percentage of the cost of the tractor in question. In closing he pledged that if re-elected he would get every cent of Federal aid road money for Nevada county that was possible to obtain.

Representative's Race

Mr. Bryson opened the representative's race. He charged Mr. Silvey with stating that he was too young to hold the position. Bryson then pointed out numerous American statesmen who had served this country when only in their twenties. The latter part of his speech was devoted to the 1935 session of the legislature. At this session, he charged, Silvey was absent when the vote was taken on the Thorn liquor bill, and also that Silvey was absent on many other occasions when votes were taken on important bills. In closing, Bryson stated he was in favor of free text books and a moderate old-age pension.

Mr. Silvey came next on the pro-

Spokesman for R. A. Cook Also Appears in Hope Early Saturday

State Senator Sam Levine of Pine Bluff brought his candidacy for lieutenant governor to Hope Saturday with an address at 10 a. m. at Second and Main streets. He was introduced by Mayor Albert Graves.

A spokesman for R. A. Cook, candidate for governor, addressed the crowd briefly and asked support of Judge Cook in the August primary.

No candidates had applied for permission to speak at Hope city hall Saturday afternoon or night, Mayor Graves said at noon.

Washington Has Peak Living Cost

Higher There Than in 58 Representative Cities —Rents Highest

WASHINGTON. —(AP)— The cost of living for a family of moderate means is found to be higher in Washington than in 58 other representative cities.

A study conducted by the Works Progress Administration showed that expenses of a family of four in Mobile, Ala., where life was cheapest, were 79.4 per cent of those in Washington.

The study was based on prices in May, 1935, but Miss Margaret L. Streker, who made the study, said "there have been no significant price changes since that time."

High rents were responsible for the heavier cost of living in Washington, which stood at 100, followed by San Francisco, 98, Minneapolis 97.8, New York city, 97, Chicago, 95.6.

HONOLULU, T. H. —(AP)— After enjoying the advantages and fulfilling the duties of American citizenship for some 40 years, including office holding, voting and jury service, James Graham Placidus Morgan, Honolulu businessman, has discovered he is not an American citizen.

A native of Wales, he believed his father had been naturalized. Finding this was not the case, he has applied for derivative citizenship.

Turned Brown

By Brown Turner

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — (Special) — Even Democratic postmasters of the future will have to know how to read and write if the last ball tossed by President Roosevelt means anything, and I reckon it does. Now congressmen will have to resurrect the old free seed gag or learn to play the fiddle, or both.

Since the grasshoppers developed stream lines and become air-minded they've taken up where the AAA left off and given the jaybirds a break on the side, and Mr. Landon hasn't changed his mind about the New Deal. He's still agin it.

GIBRALTAR, Spain—(AP)—A battle raged Saturday in the Straits of Gibraltar between six Spainsh warships and rebel forts at Ceuta and Morocco.

3,000 Foreigners Evacuated

PARIS, France — (AP) — American, British and French vessels co-operating Saturday in the evacuation of refugees from Spain brought more than 3,000 foreigners, including United States citizens, from the civil war scene.

The American export liner Exeter steamed to Marseille bearing 162 American refugees and other nationals from Barcelona, while the Oklahoma arrived at Bilbao and the Coast Guard cutter Cayuga stood by at San Sebastian.

Farley Attacks Landon's Speech, and Forecasts F. D. R's Victory

WASHINGTON. —(AP)— The speech by Gov. Alf M. Landon accepting the Republican presidential nomination evoked criticism and praise Friday amidst a series of other developments bearing on the political campaign.

James A. Farley, in a statement as the Democratic chairman, said the Kansan appeared "more concerned with dodging" than with definitely discussing his principles last night.

Farley again predicted re-election of the president by more electorial votes than in 1932 and said "no bolting Democrat will draw enough support from others" to affect New Deal chances.

Regarding the reaction to the executive order placing all postmasterships under the Civil Service, he said no such move would have been necessary "if the Republicans had voted for one of those Civil Service bills in Congress last year."

At Grand Rapids, Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) said the Roosevelt order was "a neat scheme to give life jobs to existing Farley incumbents. Typically Roosevelttian is the fact that this thing is done by executive order, rather than by legislation."

Farley told reporters that registration in some counties in Kansas showed 10 times more Republicans had changed to Democratic registration than the other way around. He said Montgomery county, where the Landon home is, showed a shift favorable to the Democrats.

Among the happenings of the day, Senator Carter Glass (Dem., Va.) said it was "nonsense" to interpret a recent assertion by him as indicative that he would "take a walk" from his party.

"Whither would I walk?" he asked reporters. "The Republican platform and nominee are certainly as far away from those things I mentioned as any Democrat could be."

His statement in question was that "we now have a system of government of privilege and discrimination."

Apology Is Made by Rev. Coughlin

Priest Faces Possible Discipline by Head of Catholic Church

VATICAN CITY — (AP) — Bishop Michael Gallagher of Detroit was expected Friday night in high Vatican circles to defend the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin who faces possible discipline for political activities. Bishop Gallagher will arrive in Naples Saturday en route to an audience with Pope Pius.

One of the subjects of their conference may be the radio priest's characterization of President Roosevelt as a "liar," a denunciation for which he publicly apologized Thursday.

Vatican officials talked with the American priest by transatlantic telephone last week, a reliable source declared. Whether the conversation had any connection with the apology was not disclosed.

Prelates called attention to the "mildness" of a statement made by Bishop Gallagher after the priest attacked the president.

Revenue Bureau to Go Down Line for Candidate Ashley

FUTRELL HOME, ILL

Governor Denies He Returned From Texas Because of Politics

LITTLE ROCK—Returning unexpectedly to Little Rock Friday after leaving the Texas Centennial special train at Texarkana Thursday night, Governor Futrell denied that his return had any connection with politics or "duties of the office," but was caused by illness.

The fact that the governor had abandoned the Texas trip did not become known generally until about noon. The discovery was followed immediately by a new flock of rumors to the effect that he had been called back to help squelch a supposed insurrection in administration political forces.

Governor Futrell told a reporter that he was not "called back," that he had not heard of any "political troubles" or other matters that demanded his attention, but that he had returned because he did not feel equal to the duties that would have been required of him as the head of the Arkansas delegation to the Texas Centennial celebration.

He said he had been troubled with headaches and stomach disturbances for several days, but thought he was better and decided Thursday to accompany the Arkansas group to Dallas and Fort Worth. He had a recurrence of the trouble after boarding the train and decided to leave it at Texarkana and return to Little Rock, he said.

Mrs. Futrell and Mrs. Ernie Maddox, private secretary to the governor, continued on the trip.

Designates Representative

Governor Futrell designated John England, Texarkana business man, to represent him at official functions during the Arkansas Day festivities at the Texas Centennial.

Lieut. Gov. Lee Cazort, who would have become acting governor if Governor Futrell had left the state, did not interrupt his speaking campaign and would not have come to the governor's office unless urgent public business had required his presence, it was said at his headquarters Friday.

It was not decided definitely and finally until Friday that the State Revenue Department, the largest administration agency, would go down the line for Senator John C. Ashley of Izard county, candidate for governor.

Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman had a conference with 12 heads of divisions in the department Friday and that was followed by a general meeting of department employs after office hours Friday afternoon.

Mr. Wiseman parried queries of reporters as to the purpose of the morning conference, saying that he conferred with "the boys" weekly and some of them daily regarding office matters.

It was learned later that the afternoon meeting was for the purpose of ascertaining the preference of employes of the department in the matter of selecting a candidate for governor.

Said to Be "Unanimous"

It was reported that the employes present "unanimously" favored supporting Senator Ashley and that the "word will be passed along" that there is no mutiny or defection in the ranks of the administration so far as the Revenue Department is concerned.

Mr. Wiseman said that he will not appoint an attorney for the department immediately to fill the vacancy resulting from resignation of W. A. Jackson of Walnut Ridge. Mr. Jackson resigned because he could not go with the department in supporting Senator Ashley, he said in a letter to Mr. Wiseman, in which he charged that Mr. Wiseman was a member of a "self-appointed committee" which selected Senator Ashley as the administration candidate.

Mr. Wiseman said he had accepted Mr. Jackson's resignation, but declined to comment on the letter.

"I am a lawyer and may handle the department's legal work awhile myself," he said.

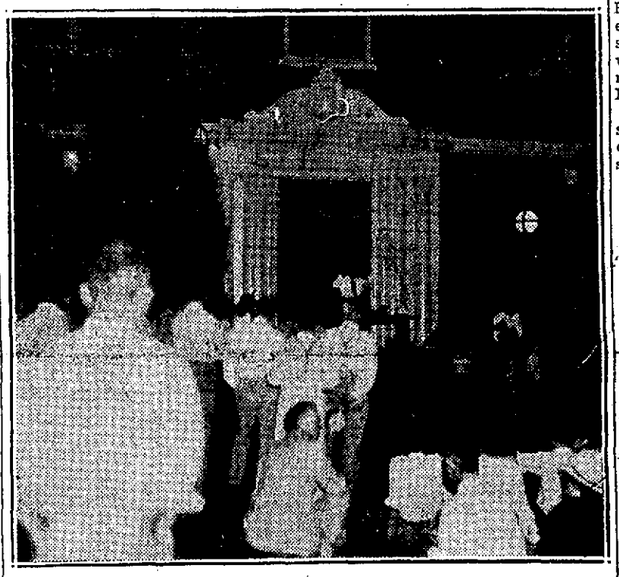

Fishermen Blame Shark for Getting Self Caught

SANTA BARBARA, Calif.—(AP)—Angling for smaller fish, Clarence Mitchell and F. M. Nalley suddenly hooked a 16-foot blue shark.

While they were struggling with it and wondering how they could bring it to graff, the shark suddenly flopped aboard their yacht and became entangled in line and other gear. They killed it with a tiller rod.

Here are the first night press photographs ever published in Hope.

The top picture is a close-up of John C. Ashley, administration candidate for governor, speaking on the east steps of Hope city hall at 9 o'clock last Wednesday night, July 22.

Pictures were made also of the Nevada county stump tour meeting at Laneburg Friday night and will be published this coming week. The Star will photograph other state candidates at night meetings in Hope, and will take daylight pictures of the opening of the Hempstead county stump tour at 9 o'clock Monday morning at Patmos.

Bale to Acre for Local Plantation

R. R. Gillespie Brings in to Hope a Stalk With Nearly 40 Bolls

Further evidence that Southwest Arkansas would produce its best cotton crop in years was expressed here Saturday by R. R. Gillespie, well known Hempstead and Miller county planter.

Mr. Gillespie brought to The Star office a sample of his cotton crop at Clipper, Ark., just west of Fulton. The stalk had nearly 40 bolls. None were punctured nor damaged in any way.

Mr. Gillespie said that he had 100 acres of the same variety of cotton and predicted the 100 acres would produce more than a bale to the acre.

"It's the best cotton crop I've had in 11 years," he declared.

"The vicinity of Clipper has wonderful prospects of a bumper crop this season. Not only on my farm, but the ones surrounding, have good crops," he said.

Mr. Gillespie said that the particular stalk he brought to Hope was grown by Ed Bunn, who Gillespie declared "is the best negro farmer in Arkansas?"

Cotton Picking to Start in 10 Days

Max Cox Asserts Cotton Is Opening in Record-Breaking Time

Fifteen acres of early cotton on the Max Cox farm near Fulton will be ready to pick within 10 days if hot and dry weather continues, it was predicted Saturday by Mr. Cox.

He brought an open boll to The Star office, the second matured boll that has been reported this season.

He said that cotton was opening fast, due to hot winds and dry weather.

Has Best Corn and Cotton in 10 Years

Gus Morgan Produces Record Crop With Pair or ERA Steers

Gus Morgan, sandy-headed farmer of near Washington, walked into The Star office Saturday morning with proof that he had produced his best corn, cane and cotton crop in 10 years.

Morgan proudly announced that he had made the crop with a pair of ERA steers and with the help of his small son.

Morgan brought with him a stalk of corn which measured 11½ feet by the yard stick. The stalk bore three large ears of corn.

He also brought a stalk of cane. It was 13½ feet logn without the heading which was not matured.

Had he not pulled the cane stalk, the heading, matured, would have measured another two and a half feet Morgan opined.

The corn was planted in April. He has 11½ acres, and "it's the best I've raised in 10 years," he declared. "The same goes for my cane and cotton crop," he concluded.

He took his cane and corn samples to the ERA office for display.

Hollywood Quicker Even Than the Camera's Eye

HOLLYWOOD. —(AP)— Even in hot weather movie technicians solve problems.

Edward Arnold has a scene in which he steps from a train and greets the station master at a cross-roads settlement.

There is no train, actually. A big spotlight plays upon a train's silhouette, casting its shadow before the camera. A prop man works a smoke pot, and its black belches are fanned over the set.

You won't see a train, but you'll have the impression you saw one.

She described as shocking a mock marriage and a mock trial presided over by Gustavus T. Kirby, treasurer of the American Olympic committee, which featured the shipboard entertainment, and charged that at least 100 others had violated the training rules regarding drinking and late hours.

Uphold Louisiana Chain Store Tax

Federal Court Sustains Tax Based on Total Number of Units

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Chain stores operating in Louisiana must pay the license tax levied by the 1934 legislature, a special three-judge federal court held Friday. The tribunal dismissed a temporary order restraining collection of license taxes from the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and 13 other chain store corporations.

The chain stores contended the state was attempting to tax them on the total number of stores operated throughout the world instead of their Louisiana stores. They attacked the act as violative of the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution.

It was charged that the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. operates 1 stores in New Orleans against 87 by a chain whose operations are confined to the state, and that the A. & P. is taxed $550 per store under the act while the Louisiana operator pays only $30 a store.

"It is well settled," said the opinion written by Judge Wayne G. Borah, "that there are diferences and advantages in favor of large chains and for that reason the state may tax the large chains more heavily than the smaller ones, and upon a graduated basis.

"In the present case the state imposes a license or privilege tax, clearly within its authority, for the privilege of doing business in Louisiana. The measure of that tax is the number of stores in the entire chain, property beyond the jurisdiction of the state is in any just sense taxed under the statute.

"The rate only is affected by units of the chain outside Louisiana and these units are considered only for the purpose of determining the type of business done in Louisiana and the value of the privilege of operating each unit in the state. Where as here the tax exists, the extent of the burden is a matter for the discretion of the legislature. The wisdom of its exercise is not the concern of the court."

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

In hot weather there is more danger of hydrophobia than at any other time of the year.

This is one of the oldest diseases known to man. Long before the time of Pasteur it was recognized that the saliva of a dog with rabies, or hydrophobia, would transmit this disease.

Hydrophobia means fear of water. This name was given to the disease because it described one of the most significant symptoms.

It is one of the strange superstitions about hydrophobia that it commonly occurs in the "dog days." People thought that the danger from mad dogs was greater during summer than at any other time.

A dog may go mad, however, at any time of year. It is merely more likely to occur between April and September than from October to March, because dogs run loose more often in warm weather than they do in cold.

At such times there is greater risk of the pet dog being bitten by a mad dog and thus becoming infected. There also is greater danger of a mad dog attacking children or adults in its vicinity.

With hydrophobia, as with other infections, prevention is far more important than cure. Part of the prevention depends on picking up homeless animals and disposing of them. Another major step is insistence on muzzles for every dog running loose where there are children.

The dog that is kept in a good home usually is watched carefully, and is not as likely to be involved as a dog that runs everywhere. However, any dog, under provocation, or sometimes even without provocation, may suddenly bite a human being.

Because of the terrible possibilities of rabies, a definite program should be followed after a child has been bitten by a dog. First, the animal should be penned up or kept secured for at least 10 days, during which time it may either die or develop the symptoms of hydrophobia. If it does not do either, it is reasonable to believe that the dog has not been infected.

Many people make the mistake of killing the dog and disposing of it. Sometimes clubbing the dog results in damaging the head, which makes it exceedingly difficult for investigators to examine the brain of the dog to determine whether it had hydrophobia.

The wound made by the dog should be cauterized immediately with carbolic or fuming nitric acid. If there is the slightest suspicion that the dog which has bitten the child was mad, the Pasteur treatment for preventing hydrophobia should be taken immediately.

If there are bites on the face or on the hands, it is even more important to begin treatment immediately, because a bite on the face or hands, provided it is infected with hydrophobia, offers opportunity for dangerous symptoms much quicker than a bite elsewhere.

The Pasteur treatment now is available through many private and state laboratories, as well as through the offices of individual physicians, who may obtain the necessary material from pharmaceutical houses.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Are you off to visit the home folks during John's vacation? Or have you decided to take that cottage on Lake Upajusic three hundred miles as the tires run?

Perhaps this time, Mrs. Mother, it's an honest-to-goodness junket you're planning, across the continent in a train, several days and nights of it before the baby can lay down in peace and quiet and catch up sleep.

If you are planning any of these things, doubtless you are worrying about the baby and his upset routine more than anything else. It's worth worrying about, but only to the extent of taking every precaution possible and preparing in advance all you can think of to keep him well.

Transportation of food is the big item, unless you are nursing him. About this matter I certainly should ask the doctor. He may suggest, for a short run, that his regular food be prepared and kept cold in a traveler's ice-box or a sterilized thermos.

May Favor Change of Diet

Or for longer runs he may advise changing the diet for a day or two or more portable forms, such as condensed milk or milk powder, and breaking him in to it a day or two beforehand. Perhaps he is getting them anyway, so that's easy. Any water used, however, must be boiled and for this reason, and other reasons, a pocket-size "stove" should be part of the equipment.

Enough bottles should be sterilized and corked to carry you through. If the journey is a three-or-four day affair, however, they may be boiled daily in the train kitchen or otherwise. Be sure there is a supply of boiled nipples, too, plenty—in a container with a tight cover. All these can be packed in a big box marked "Baby." Also any utensils (funnel and measuring cup) needed for his feedings. His regular cup and spoon should go along, and of course, be thoroughly cleansed each time used.

Orange juice and tomato juice offer on problem to the traveler, neither do the strained prepared vegetables, put up in their little cans. Cereal can be cooked ahead for a day's supply but not longer. Perhaps doing without it for a day, if there is no way to fix it, is better than giving it to him too old. But here again is your stove.

Delay Start After Feeding

His meals should be regular, as at home; his bed a comfortable basket or the "baby attachment," if you go by motor.

Take all the clean didies you can rake up—and a rubber-lined bag for wet ones; lots of clean clothes—and sweaters, wraps and covers for sudden changes in weather.

Don't start right off again, if he has just been fed. Give digestion a chance to start before the swaying and bumping and short stops begin. Wash his face and hands often. Keep the sheet under him flat and dry. Bathe him when and where you can.

Try to protect him from dust (or cinders) and from direct sun, also; when you arrive let him be quiet for a day or two to rest his nerves thoroughly. If he won't eat normally en route, that's all right. Don't force him or worry him.

A single day's run is hard on adults, so, although most babies travel well, if cared for properly, it isn't any wonder they get tired or cross. Multiply it by two or three and it is suite obvious that extreme care is necessary if the little one is to do his globe-trotting with you and be happy.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD.—Short takes: Sometimes it seems that nothing in this town is quite genuine, not even an unhappy state of mind, such as worry. There's an assistant producer who, associates swear, has a few more gray hairs sewn into this toupee every few days, so his bosses will think he's fretting about his job.

Speaking of sham—and speaking of gray hairs, too—there are those stories about the aspirations of professional pugilism of (1) Mr. Clark Gable, and (2) Mr. George Raft. Slugger Gable, who would look terrible with cauliflower ears, was working in a prize-fight picture when his announcement was made. Butcher Raft's purpose is not to apparent, since he has not yet been cast for a leather-pushing film. But he will be.

Without surrendering his amateur status, Errol Flynn vows he's going to do some nose-punching of certain slanderous radio-snoopers.

Record in Tough Breaks

They call him Hard-Luck Henry Hathaway. He was directing "I Loved a Soldier," when Marlene Dietrich deserted the picture. He began again with Margaret Sullavan, and she broke her arm.

Then he was assigned to "Beau Geste" and the studio decided not to make the picture. So he was switched to "Spawn of the North."

A quarter million dollars was spent in preparation, and everything seemed set. Then Carole Lombard got sick, so it's all off.

Popular Hermit

Mary Boland wants to retire and live on an island. That's what she said the other day. Everybody was surprised, never having suspected her of any eremitic urge. Somebody asked whether she has picked out her island. Miss Boland said yeah—Manhattan.

Competition is so frantic in the flicker trade that rival studios are working on the same subjects. B. P. Schulberg and Warner Brothers are in a race to film a life story of Allan Pinkerton, the detective. Edward Arnold will star in the Schulberg version.

And there will be two productions of "Camille." One is being launched now by M-G-M with Greta Garbo, and a British company has offered the same role to Ann Harding. Funny thing is that the latter concern is naively seeking the services of an M-G-M director for Miss Harding's "Camille."

Teamed With the Best

Charles Boyer, snatched out of limbo by shrewd Walter Wagner, is doing all right these days. A Dietrich picture now, a Garbo picture next. "Beloved" is the name of the Garbo item, which is to be about a lady-friend of Napoleon.

The too-too-gallant Francis Lederer took his leave of Paramount the other day and invaded the offices to kiss all the gals' hands. The confusion was terrible among those earnest employes whose fingers were stained by carbon paper, paste, and ink.

One young woman had hysterics after being obliged to present a hand on which she had just spilled some of the acid used for correcting stencils. It tastes vile, but it didn't stop Mr. Lederer.

Caruso in Talkies!

Not long ago this department commented on the realism achieved by the trickery of projected backgrounds. Now, in London, dubbed-in sound will lend authenticity to a picture about Enrico Caruso. An actor not yet chosen will impersonate the famous tenor, but the ringing voice you hear will be Caruso's, preserved on records.

Record Parties

Hollywood's having fun with home-made records. Nelson Eddy hides a microphone in his house during parties and then plays back the conversations of guests. Plenty platitudinous and silly.

Patrick Knowles mailed little records to friends, who heard him asking them to attend his party. (Errol Flynn sent back a record voicing his regrets.) Cecil B. DeMille has records made of conferences in his office.

So Much for Love

by NARD JONES
© 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

HELENA DERRIK, youthful head of the women's sportswear department of Helvig's store, goes on a week-end party at Crest Mountain Lodge. There she meets handsome PETER HENDERSON. It is a case of love at first sight between them. Peter asks Helena to marry him, and the ceremony takes place.

Later the crowd goes swimming. Peter makes a reckless dive and is seriously injured. Lingering between life and death, he asks Helena to summon his lawyer, JOHN COURTNEY.

Courtney arrives and a short time later Peter dies. Helena learns she is sole heir to a large fortune, including the Henderson department store. She meets beautiful LEAH FRAZIER who had expected to marry Peter and realizes Leah is an enemy. Peter's uncle, Roger Barnes, manager of the store, is also hostile.

Helena decides to take over management of the store. JOHN LASSITER, banker, and Courtney are her allies. Leah Frazier tells Helena that unless she leaves town Leah and her friends will boycott the store.

This makes Helena more determined to win her fight. She tells Lassiter and Courtney that, once she has won, she intends to give up the store.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX

JOHN LASSITER turned to Helena in astonishment. "Turn the store back?" he repeated. "You can't really be serious. To whom would you turn it back? Certainly you wouldn't hand it to Roger Barnes on a silver platter!"

Helena smiled. "No, I don't think I'd do that. Why couldn't I turn it back to the employes?"

"That may be," said Lassiter, turning to her. "But we want you to stay here."

Courtney guided the coupe out of Main Street and toward Helena's apartment. "Indeed, we do."

"Who're 'we'?" Helena demanded. "I'm afraid it's only you two."

Lassiter grinned. "Isn't that enough?"

"Of course," Helena laughed. "It's enough for me. But a store has to have the good will of the town. Barnes was right about that. Do you think I've really destroyed a lot of good will by having him write those letters suspending credit?"

"No," the banker told her flatly. "That's just good business. You never destroy good will with legitimate business practices."

Courtney brought the car to the curb before Helena's apartment. "You don't need to go up with me," she told them. "I'll see you both tomorrow—and thanks so much for your help and encouragement."

* * *

IF Helena realized how difficult the task before her was going to be, she gave no sign of it when she walked briskly to Henderson's Department Store next morning at 8. Reaching the store building, it occurred to her that she was early—and that she had no key.

She did not have to wait long. As she stood before the curtained doors a young man barged suddenly into the entrance way and almost collided with her. His own embarrassment succeeded in flustering Helena. Clumsily he raised his hat. "Good morning, Mrs. Henderson . . ." He stopped, reddening. "I—I recognized you from yesterday. I'm Harvey Jameson, in charge of the hardware department."

Helena extended her hand. "Good morning, Mr. Jameson. Would you mind letting me in?"

"Of course not," he said.

Helena turned to the stairs which led to the mezzanine offices. "I'll be seeing you later on."

"Yes, Mrs. Henderson . . ." He seemed about to say something more, thought better of it—then finally blurted out: "I . . . I was terribly sorry to hear about Mr. Henderson. I didn't know him very well, but—"

"Thank you, Mr. Jameson. I appreciate what you say."

* * *

BUT, Helena told herself as she climbed the stairway to the mezzanine, she didn't really appreciate what Harvey Jameson had said. The truth was that his condolences embarrassed her. And why? Resolutely she faced this question. "It's because—because I feel so little for poor Peter . . . no, that's not true. I do feel a great deal for him. But not enough. Not what a widow should."

Too late now to ponder over this. With the heartlessness of reality, a row of office doors confronted her. As she stood there, looking at them, she was startled by a footfall on the stairway. She turned to see Roger Barnes.

"Good morning," he said. His whole manner had changed from the day before. Now he was pleasant—almost too pleasant, Helena thought suspiciously. "Down early, I see." He came toward her, grasped her hand unnecessarily. "I planned to get—ah—Mr. Henderson's office ready for you before you arrived this morning."

"Would you mind very much, Mr. Barnes, if I took another office?"

He seemed astonished. "Why—why, that office is the largest and has the best light. And the furniture is very comfortable. I—"

"Why don't you take that one, then? I could go into yours."

Barnes was obviously delighted with the suggestion. "Well, now, I—"

"Let's have it that way," Helena smiled. "Assuming, of course, that you have decided to stay—that you believe my policies will be compatible with your ideas."

He shrugged the remark away. "I'm sure we can get along, Mrs. Henderson." Thus Helena soon found herself seated at the desk which had been Barnes'. She was about to leave the office when Barnes' secretary appeared.

"Mrs. Frank Frazier and her daughter would like to see you," the girl said.

Helena's heart sank. "All . . . right, Miss Marks."

* * *

MRS. FRANK FRAZIER was even more regal than her daughter.

"We've been told by one of the girls downstairs," said Leah at once, "that nothing more is to be charged to us. Just what does this mean?"

Helena started. "Why—" she paused, embarrassed. "I'm afraid that in a way there's been a mistake. You should have received a letter notifying you. I believe the letters are going out today."

"Please don't quibble. With the present management one can expect a good many mistakes, as you call them. But is it, or is it not, true that you have suspended our charge accounts?"

"That's quite true," said Helena evenly. "If you will recall the amount now owing us, and the length of time it's been overdue, I'm sure you will understand."

"Understand!" flamed Mrs. Frazier. "We understand nothing except that you are a common little upstart. And that you will regret the day you came here—through what was nothing more than an unfortunate accident." She turned to her daughter. "Come, Leah!"

The door slammed hard enough to shake the pictures on the wall, and Helena dropped back into her chair, not knowing whether to laugh or cry. She was still undecided when the telephone rang at her elbow.

"This is John Lassiter," the voice said. "How are you this morning?"

"Right now," Helena admitted, "I don't feel so well."

"Then perk up. Because I'm inviting you to a party."

"A . . . a party?"

"Oh, not right now," Lassiter hurried on. "It's a whole month from now, and by that time you—well, you ought to be going places again. If you're to live in this town you'll have to attend the annual Sunshine Club ball. It's the biggest thing of the year. I'm asking you just 30 days ahead of time, because I've an idea you're going to be a mighty popular young woman hereabouts."

"I wish," said Helena weakly, "I could think so, too . . . just a little bit."

NEW YORK.—Five world record holders failing to make the grade gives you a rough idea of the formidableness of America's Olympic track and field team.

It is the most powerful squad that ever represented any country and should keep the United States' unbroken string of victories intact, regardless of track and climatic conditions.

Ben Eastman, the world record holder, regarded a short while back as the outstanding 800-meter man on this side, was eliminated.

Bill Bonthron, holder of the world mark for 1500 meters, finished fourth and out of the money.

George Varoff, the young San Francisco janitor who established a new vault mark of 14 feet 6½ inches in the national A. A. U. meet July 4 faltered when the big test came.

Walter Marty, who held the outdoor high jump mark before Cornelius Johnson and Dave Albritton came along, and Ed Burke, who held the indoor mark, failed to come through as expected.

Leading the parade of stars is Jesse Owens, Ohio State's sensational one-man team, who covers 31 feet of ground per second when in full flight over the cinders. The Alabama-born negro led the qualifiers in the 100 and 200-meter events and the broad jump, and looms as an excellent bet to be a triple winner in Berlin.

If further sprint strength is required to beat off the challenge of the challenge of the world, Ralph Metcalfe will be an able assitant to the irrepressible Buckeye, not to mention Frank Wykoff, Mack Robinson, and the 19-year-old Georgia freshman, Bobby Packard.

Faster and Higher

Owens created a world record of 21 seconds for 220 meters around a turn in winning his third event of the climatic tryouts.

Johnson and Albritton leaped to a world record of 6 feet 9¾ inches on successive efforts in the high jump.

Harold Manning of Wichita ran the fastest 3000-meter steeplechase on record, 9 minutes 8.2 seconds.

Glenn Cunningham again proved to be the complete satisfaction of everyone that he is America's premier miler when he led Archie San Romani of Emporia State Teachers to the tape in the final of the 1500-meter or "metric mile."

Not since 1908, when Mel Shephard prevailed in London, has America captured the Olympic "metric mile."

Slender, but powerful-running Don Lash, Indiana's great distance luminary, who recently shattered Paavo Nurmi's outdoor world mark for the two-mile, is the first real hope for an American victory in the 5000 or 10,000-meter runs in a dozen years.

Whoever breaks the tape head of Johnny Woodruff, the Pittsburgh freshman, or Charley Hornbostel, the former Indian a flyer, in the 800-meter number will have to do some tall running.

Goes to Towns

Forrest Towns has run the 110-meter hurdles in 14.1 no less than four times this year.

A one-two-three finish for the United States would not be too surprising in this event, with the surprising Fritz Pollard, Jr., of North Dakota, son of Brown's old All-America halfback, and Roy Staley of Southern California, backing up the nimble Towns.

Bill Sefton and Earl Meadows of this year's Southern California array and Bill Graber, one-time Trojan ace, soared 14 feet 3 inches in the pole vault to get their boat rides. They do 14 feet without removing their sweat shirts.

Only in the field events does the American team appear to be a little weak. Gordon Dunn and Ken Carpenter are very capable discus throwers, but Sweden and Germany have platter-tossers who have been doing 165 feet with almost listless abandon.

America has yet to win the javelin throw in the Olympic Games, and although Lee Bartlett, Malcolm Metcalf and Alton Terry can all toss the spear 220 feet, Finns have been doing 230 or better.

America's representatives hardly are good enough to win first places in the shot-put and hammer-throw, but pack sufficient power to score points.

Faces Difficult Diplomatic Task

One of the most delicate diplomatic assignments in recent U. S. history has been given to William Phillips, above, undersecretary of state. He will go to Rome to seek solution of the problem raised by Italy's conquest of Ethiopia as it affects future U. S. diplomatic relations with the seized country. Recent U. S. policy has been to refuse to recognize territorial gains made by force.

Stone Axe People Live in South Seas

Scientist Discovers Fine-Looking Race of Papuan People

HONOLULU, T. H.—(AP)—An isolated people, who live in the interior of Papua and are still in the stone age as far as their implements go, were discussed by F. E. Williams, U. S. government anthropologist of the territory of Papua, on his arrival here from the South Pacific.

Williams recently flew over the section of mandated New Guinea and the territory of Papua in which explorers three years ago discovered a group previously unknown to the outside world.

It is a beautiful country of great valleys and rolling open land lightly timbered, Williams said. The people live principally on sweet potatoes, cultivating them in neatly laid out little gardens, and make their homes in scattered farmsteads.

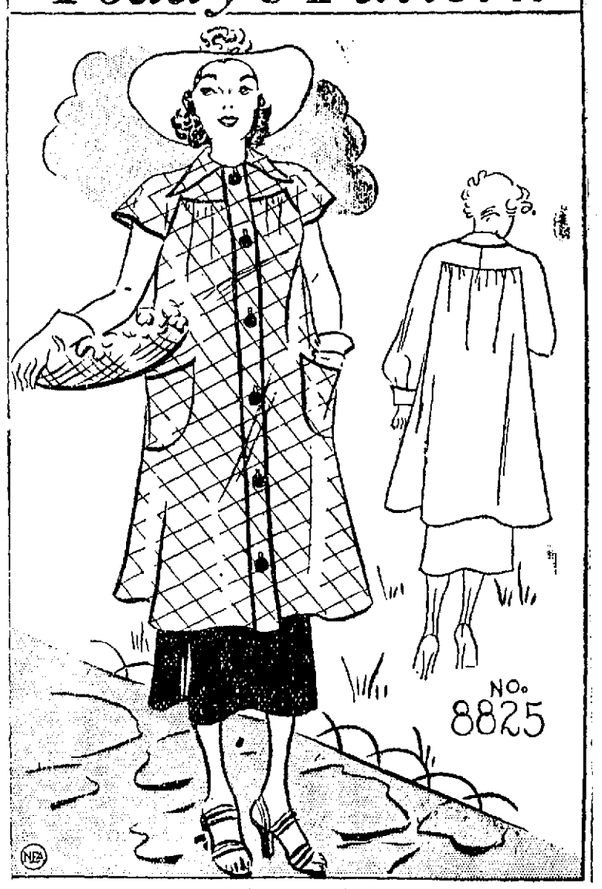

Williams made the trip with Jack Hides, who discovered the people with Ivan Champion, another explorer who plans further studies this year in the far-away district.

Hides described the people as "typical Papuans—dark, fine-looking fellows who carry excellent stone axes."

During the World war the U. S. Air Service used the same insignia as the Allies—the red, white, and blue—but they used it with the white spot in the center and te red circle on the outside.

Spain has an area more than twice that of Great Britain, aside from the colonies.

Today's Pattern

NOTHING is more useful than a smock (No. 8825), especially if it is a flattering one like this model. With a petal-shaped collar and a button-down-the-front closing, this can be made from broadcloth, shantung or calico. Patterns are sized small (34-36), medium (38-40), and large (42-44). Size medium requires 3 3-4 yards of 35-inch material. Use 5 3-4 yards of 1 1-2 inch bias binding for trimming.

Each spirit weaves the robe it wears
From out life's busy loom;
And common tasks and daily cares
Make up the threads of doom.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And to do His will with a ready heart,
And hands that are swift and willing.

Than to snap the slender, delicate threads
Of our curious life asunder,
And then blame Heaven for the tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

Shirley Temple in New Saenger Film

"Poor Little Rich Girl" Is Opening in This City on Sunday

It's always an event when Shirley Temple comes to town, but according to advance reports, when "The Poor Little Rick Girl," the tiny star's new hit, opens Sunday at the Saenger, it will be something in a way of a celebration, an epoch, a new milestone in entertainment.

For, definitely, the talented Temple miss is said to give the performance of her life in this new film and, to top it off, she's surrounded by a veritable gallery of Hollywood's brightest stars including Alice Faye, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley and Michael Whelen.

Add to the star and the cast a modern, stirring, romantic story and five bubbling new song hits by those ace composers, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, and you have a few of the reasons why "The Poor Little Rich Girl" is being hailed so highly.

Shirley, of course, plays the title role. She is seen as the daughter of Michael Whalen, a wealthy young business man who is far too occupied making money to devote much time to his daughter.

Shirley is said to perform astonishing dances that top everything she has ever done before and she sings five new songs including "When I'm With You," "But Definitely," "You Gotta Eat Your Spinach, Baby," "Oh, My Goodness" and "Military Man."

EDEN

By Helen Welshimer

THE hills that march to Eden
Grow higher with the years;
When one begins the journey
The higher land appears
To be a little distant,
Oh, never very far,
A mile or maybe two miles
From any place you are.

AS mountains in a clear land
Seem close when they are not,
So Eden is chameleon,
And when its fields are sought
It drifts beyond the questing,
It lifts a spire to say:
"What makes you think you'll enter
My premises today?"

BUT Eden is surprising.
Oh, suddenly, sometimes
Its clean fields, its green fields,
Its sweet, unbroken chimes
Come hastily before us—
A miracle is wrought.
Heaven is a strange land,
Not found when it is sought.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—The mystery of what has happened to Louis R. Glavis, the super-sleuth who has been combating graft and scandal for PWA and the Interior Department these last three years, seems almost as deep as any that Glavis himself has unraveled in his spectacular career.

But it is clear enough that his days as chief investigator for Secretary-Administrator Harold L. Ickes began to be numbered months ago, when he first crossed the path of Ebert K. Burlew, grand vizier to Ickes.

The duel between Glavis and Burlew became intense and the result is that Glavis is going to work for the senate campaign expenditures investigating committee and will also do odd jobs of investigating for the president on the side.

All hands are at great pains to make clear that Glavis didn't resign, that he wasn't asked to resign, and that he wasn't fired.

After Administrator Hackett announced at a PWA party that Glavis was on the way out—and there were some loud cheers—Ickes caused Hackett to apologize to Glavis. But the famous detective has been sitting in his office with practically nothing to do and for weeks Bradley Smith of his staff has been known as "acting chief" of the division of investigation.

Glavis' first assistant left some time ago as a result of disagreement with Burlew.

Burlew Flattens Foes

Meanwhile, there's an atmosphere of tense embarrassment in the Ickes domain and one is reminded that 28 years ago, in the Ballinger scandal, Glavis as a young man who dared to tell the truth was a storm center at the Interior Department. The circumstances, of course, are different.

Glavis is the latest of several high officials under Ickes who have been flattened out more or less completely because they antagonized Burlew. Although Ickes has often been blamed for always supporting Burlew and allowing him to ride over his other subordinates in an intermittent three-year sniping fest, the fact is that Burlew has been smarter than his enemies and hence a much more effective sniper.

Ickes has become persuaded that he has suffered from the "snooping" and "man-hunting" tactics of the big Blavis force of investigators. Many PWA officials and employes were glad to side with Burlew, charging various petty or inept invasions of their offices or projects and insinuations as to their honesty.

They allege that Glavis investigated "a lot of stuff he had no business investigating" and it appears that his inquiries sometimes led him into the affairs of some of the numerous fellow Chicagoans whom Ickes brought into PWA.

Even some of Glavis' friends admit that some of his investigators acted stupidly or offensively, although it isn't easy for an outsider to judge as to the justification for the considerable bitterness against Glavis.

Point to Fine Record

On the other hand, Glavis partisans point out that his division made a strong record against political crooks, oil company lobbyists, shady PWA employes, code chiselers, kickback operators, and would-be grafters.

Some of them suggest that the Glavis-Burlew battle is not over, that it is too bitter to be buried by the detective's departure, and that "Lou always gets his man."

The recent period of embarrassment has been partly due to the fact that Glavis knows so much about the administration and partly due to the fact that the White House crowd likes his work.

Glavis sat in his office for weeks after his enemies expected him to leave, apparently waiting for another appointment which would satisfy him.

He and his staff have infiltrated through a large part of the administration, encountering many interesting facts here and there. It has been suggested that he might cause the administration an enormous amount of embarrassment in the campaign were he so minded, and that thought has not been ignored by Ickes.

Ickes Unlikely to Go

However, Roosevelt has sometimes used Glavis for secret investigations and feels he can use him some more. The White House continues to be sour on Burlew, which appears to be a large reason behind rumors of a likely shakeup in the department after election, involving the possible departure of Ickes himself. These rumors should be discounted, because Ickes will be used in the campaign and Roosevelt is still fond of him off and on.

So, for one reason and another and by special arrangement, Glavis will receive $6000 a year as special counsel or chief investigator for the Senate committee, instead of the $3600 which usually goes with that job.

His salary under Ickes, however, has been $8000. And Burlew's salary has been increased to $9000 a year.

Glavis—detective hero of the Ballinger affair, the Teapot Dome scandal, the Hearst "Mexican documents" expose, the 'power trust" investigation, Ku Klux Klan investigation, and other causes celebre—will be worth watching in his campaign investigations.

His record indicates you'll hear much more of him. Whether there will be further explosions in Interior and PWA is anybody's guess.

Spain's Rich Man "Angel" of Revolt

Juan March Previously Arrested by Radical Spanish Government

MADRID, Spain—(AP)—The government asserted Friday night it had intercepted a radio message from Gen. Francisco Franco, leader of the rebellion, to Juan March, supposed to be Spain's richest man, and that it believed March financed the revolt.

March, a former member of the Chamber of Deputies, was expelled in 1931 because of "moral incompatibility." Then he was arrested and housed in the common delinquents' section of the Madrid jail on a charge that he was guilty of bribery in obtaining tobacco concessions in Morocco.

After being in jail several months, awaiting action by the National Assembly, March escaped because a prison guard chief was "sorry for him," and slipped past the customs in Gibraltar. Officials at the prison said the guard chief had allowed him to drive away in a fast automobile when he complained he was ill.

The Spanish consular clerk slain at Barcelona was Santiago Itsuralde, who started out July 22 in an automobile flying the American flag to bring to the consulate George Jenkins, head of the Ford Motor Company of Barcelona, who was on the outskirts of the city.

When he failed to return and not a word was received concerning him for more than 24 hours, consular officials aided by Spanish government authorities, began an investigation which established that the automobile was fired upon and set afire after Itsuralde and the British subject, who was driving the machine, had been killed.

The consulate's report to the State Department did not indicate whether the men were killed by rebels, government forces, or irresponsible persons. Subsequent dispatches said that Jenkins was safe.

Charged 520 Pct. Interest; Arrested

Negro Borrowed $12, Made $2.40 Payments for Two Years

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—A manager of a loan company was convicted here Friday of violating Tennessee's small loan act after a negro testified she paid 520 per cent interest for a $1. loan.

The defendant, W. E. Nowell, was fined $375. He was the sixth convicted this week in what District Attorney General McLain said was a drive against "loan sharks."

A negro said he borrowed $12 in March, 1934, and for the next two years paid $2.40 every two weeks, missing only occasional payments. He stopped paying, he said, upon the advice of the attorney general.

A negro woman said she borrowed $5 in 1934 and paid $1 each two weeks until January of this year, a total of 520 per cent.

State laws permit small loan companies to charge six per cent interest plus a three per cent per month investigation fee.

Fossil of Camel Found Near Cheyenne, Okla.

NORMAN, Okla.—(AP)—The fossil of a prehistoric camel, a rare find in Oklahoma, soon will join other remains in the museum of paleontology at the University of Oklahoma.

First discovered in Roger Mills county near Cheyenne, Okla., three years ago, the bones of the huge camel were carefully transported to the state university's department of paleontology here. J. Willis Stovall, director of the museum, has nearly restored it.

"Camels were rare in Oklahoma," said Ralph B. Shead, of the paleontology project, "and this specimen is the most complete of any let found."

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

GREAT hero of Republican party ideals is Alexander Hamilton. Opposed to Thomas Jefferson, he insisted on a strong, conservative Constitution and on adherence strictly to the letter. As first secretary of the treasury, he had the United States assume the debts of the individual states, to re-establish public credit and put the government on a firm financial basis.

Hamilton founded a national bank, improved the system of duties, and, in general, proved himself one of America's leading financiers. He had been a captain in the Revolutionary army, under Washington, and in 1782 was elected as a delegate from New York to the Continental Congress. In 1787 he became delegate to the constitutional convention and helped Madison draw up the Constitution.

He strongly supported the federal power and the Constitution in a series of letters which he later published under the title, "The Federalist." His death, in 1804, came from a fatal wound inflicted by Aaron Burr, with whom he had become involved in a political quarrel. Hamilton's picture appears on the 30-cent black stamp of 1870, and the same value in brown, issued in 1888.

SAY, WHAT THE SAM HILL KIND OF A COUNTRY IS THIS? I HAVE BACON EVERY MORNING OF MY LIFE.

IT'S THE LAW, SIR. THE DICTATOR DISLIKES THE AROMA OF PIGS. HE WON'T PERMIT PORK OF ANY KIND.

BAH! HE'S A CONFOUNDED TYRANT!

EXACTLY, SIR! I TRIED TO REASON WITH HIM ABOUT YOUR DAUGHTER'S CASE, BUT HE WOULDN'T LISTEN.

THE WAY TO REASON WITH THAT CRACKPOT HOSKINS, IS WITH DOLLARS - NOT SENSE!

OH, NO, NO! THIS IS ONE TIME WHERE MONEY CAN ACCOMPLISH NOTHING.

MONEY, HOSKINS, CAN ACCOMPLISH ANYTHING! GET ME AN AUDIENCE WITH THAT UPSTART, AND I'LL PROVE IT.

I WARN YOU! I WARN YOU! IF YOU TRY TO BRIBE THE DICTATOR TO RELEASE YOUR DAUGHTER, HE'LL KILL YOU.

BREAD THAT TURNED TO ROSES

IN a silver cradle, tiny Elizabeth of Hungary was borne to the castle of her betrothed, son of the Landgrave of Thuringia. At 14, she was married, but the luxury of her surroundings only brought more sorrow to her as she observed the misery of the peasants.

One day Elizabeth filled her apron with bread for the poor. As she was leaving the castle, the Landgrave stopped her and demanded to see what was in the apron. Trembling with fear, she displayed—not the bread, but a mass of roses!

Thenceforth, Elizabeth devoted her life to the poor. When her husband died, in 1227, she was deprived of her regency. Driven from home, oppressed and ridiculed by her own nobility, she renounced the world and entered a Franciscan convent. She died in 1231, at the age of 24, and four years later, Pope Gregory IX canonized her. In 1932, on the seventh centenary of her death, Hungary issued a set of four stamps in her honor.

KINGFISHERS

THESE WELL-MARKED BIRDS ARE FOUND IN WIDELY SCATTERED AREAS OF THE EARTH/ THE AMERICAN FORMS LIVE IN HOLES DUG IN THE BANKS OF LONELY COUNTRY STREAMS.

AS THEIR NAME IMPLIES, THEY FEED CHIEFLY ON FISH, AND ONE CAN BE SURE THAT THERE ARE PLENTY OF SMALL FISH IN ANY STREAM NEAR WHICH A KINGFISHER BUILDS HIS HOME

OVER PROSPECTIVE PREY, THE BIRD HOVERS IN MID-AIR, BEATING ITS WINGS BACKWARD AND FORWARD.

WHEN READY FOR THE DIVE AFTER A LUCKLESS FISH, THE KINGFISHER HALF CLOSES HIS WINGS AND SHOOTS DOWNWARD INTO THE WATER LIKE A BLUE METEOR... A VERITABLE LIVING SPEARHEAD.

LONG AGO, THE KINGFISHER TRIBE CAUGHT INSECTS, BUT GRADUALLY THEY LEARNED THE ART OF FISHING/ UNLIKE THE OSPREY, WHICH CATCHES FISH WITH ITS CLAWS, THE KINGFISHER USES ITS SHARP, SPEAR-LIKE BEAK.
